Commissioning Pennant on Navy Ships

The commissioning pennant has for centuries been the symbol of a man-o'-war.

It is believed to date from the 17th century when the Dutch were at war with the English. Dutch Admiral Maarten Harpertszoon Tromp hoisted a broom at his masthead to symbolize his intention to sweep the English from the sea.

This gesture was answered by British Admiral William Blake, who hoisted a horsewhip indicating his intention to chastise the Dutch.

The victorious British thus set the precedent for a long, narrow commissioning pennant to symbolize the original horsewhip as the distinctive symbol of a man-o'-war.

The modern U.S. Navy commissioning pennant is blue at the hoist with a union of seven white stars and a horizontal red and white stripe at the fly.

USS CANOPUS (AS 34)

The Second Ship of the Fleet to Bear the Name

Her keel was laid on 2 March 1964 and she was launched 12 February 1965. Mrs. Earl L. Sackett, wife of the World War II Commanding Officer of the first CANOPUS (AS 9), broke the traditional bottle of champagne in her role as sponsor.

CANOPUS was commissioned on 4 November 1965 with the Honorable Graeme C. Bannerman, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, as principal speaker.

After a short outfitting period, CANOPUS sailed for the Caribbean on 7 January 1966 for shakedown training at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. She then returned to Charleston for final loading and outfitting prior to assignment to Cooper River FBM Replenishment SITE IV on 24 June 1966 with Submarine Squadron EIGHTEEN.

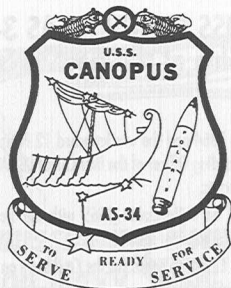

On 24 September 1966, CANOPUS deployed from Charleston. Arriving in Rota, Spain, on 10 October, CANOPUS relieved USS HOLLAND (AS 32) and reported to Commander Submarine Squadron SIXTEEN for duty. While on site, CANOPUS accomplished more Polaris refits than any other submarine tender in a comparable length of time.

CANOPUS was relieved at Rota, Spain, by HOLLAND on 20 April 1968 and sailed to Bremerton, Washington, for an extensive overhaul period.

Upon completion of the overhaul, CANOPUS sailed for Holy Loch, Scotland. During May 1970 she relieved USS SIMON LAKE (AS 33) in Holy Loch and reported to Commander Submarine Squadron FOURTEEN for duty. CANOPUS was again relieved by HOLLAND in November 1975 and returned to Charleston for her second overhaul period.

CANOPUS returned to Rota, Spain, in December 1976, where she relieved SIMON LAKE and began a distinguished tour of service for Submarine Squadron SIXTEEN. In June 1979, CANOPUS disestablished SITE II at Rota and, without skipping a beat, resumed operations at Naval Weapons Station, Charleston, South Carolina, relieving SIMON LAKE. CANOPUS continued to serve with distinction as a unit of Commander Submarine Squadron EIGHTEEN until November 1983.

In January 1984, CANOPUS once again entered Charleston Naval Shipyard for an extensive overhaul and conversion period. CANOPUS returned on line in March 1985. In August 1985, CANOPUS relieved SIMON LAKE at SITE VI, Naval Submarine Base, Kings Bay, Georgia. As the resident tender at SITE VI, CANOPUS provided the repair and support services necessary to keep the assigned submarines of Squadron SIXTEEN on station and ready at all times.

THE SHIP'S EMBLEM

The ship's emblem represents, in symbolic form, the character of the ship. The CANOPUS emblem is a shield signifying the ship's defensive and protecting function as opposed to the aggressive cutting edge of a combatant.

The Greek ship and the star cluster represent the Agro Navis constellation in which the star CANOPUS resides. The big star connecting the scroll and the shield is CANOPUS. Flying through the void of space beside the constellation is the POLARIS missile guided and watched by the helmsman, the big star.

The dolphins above the crest are symbolic of our primary mission to support and tend the submarine force. The crossed rifles, encircled, recall the heroic stand of the crew of our namesake, USS CANOPUS (AS 9), on Bataan.

The motto set in a banner at the bottom pledges our dedicated readiness to serve in the CANOPUS tradition of determined excellence.

CANOPUS bears the name of the Pilot of Menelaus, King of Sparta. His name was given to the town in Egypt where the legend holds that he died. After CANOPUS died, he is said to have been transformed into a star.

The star CANOPUS is a yellowish-white star in the southern hemisphere and the second brightest star in the sky. Only Sirius is brighter. CANOPUS can be found in the constellation Carina, a part of the older Argo Navis or "Ship" constellation, estimated to be 100 light years (or 600 trillion miles) from Earth. CANOPUS can't be seen from north of the latitude of Florida.

STORY OF THE ORIGINAL CANOPUS (AS 9)

The first CANOPUS was originally built as a merchant ship but acquired by the Navy, converted into a submarine tender and commissioned at the Boston Naval Shipyard on 22 January 1922. CANOPUS was assigned to the Asiatic Squadron with six World War I class submarines, taking up residence in Manila. CANOPUS spent those pre-war years showing the flag during cruises up and down the China coast.

Early December 1941 found CANOPUS leaving a yard period which had given her more anti-aircraft guns and some light armor. The decision was made to keep one submarine tender to maintain our subs as far forward as possible. The record of CANOPUS as a capable ship, a little older and slower than the other tenders, made "The Old Lady" the choice for the Philippines.

The Japanese forces, triumphant everywhere, began to close in on the American forces in the Philippines. CANOPUS, under command of Commander E. L. Sackett (later Rear Admiral), sailed for Marivales Bay on the tip of Bataan on Christmas day 1941. On December 29, she received extensive bomb damage. The bombs had destroyed all supply records. For the duration everything onboard was free. If something was available, anyone in need could get it. Her storerooms were thrown open to every request, and any item not in stock was improvised.

The bombing became more severe. To protect the ship, she was given a list and the crew burned smudge pots during the day, giving the appearance of a burned out hulk. At night, all the CANOPUS shops worked full blast to repair the local craft and equipment. Crewmembers took part in the ground fighting as a hastily formed naval battalion. Under command of the Executive Officer, "Hap" Goodall, CANOPUS launches were converted into miniature gunboats (the "Mickey Mouse Battle Fleet") which attacked positions along the shore line.

Through February and March 1942, CANOPUS stuck it out in her bomb-thrashed anchorage. As a hospital, machine shop, communications center, supply store and USO, she was all things to all forces fighting on Bataan. However, the overwhelming enemy forces could not be held off forever. As the ground forces fell back on Bataan, it was decided that the end was near and anything of any use to the Japanese would be destroyed. On 10 April 1942, CANOPUS was backed into deep water under her own power and was laid to rest by her own men.

CANOPUS was gone but part of her remained. Her spirit lived on in her crew, who joined the American forces for the last-ditch fight for Corregidor. Her unsinkable spirit and courage are both a legacy and a proud tradition carried forward today by USS CANOPUS (AS 34).
